To every thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven:

A time to be born, and a time to die; a time to plant, and a time to pluck up that which is planted;

A time to kill, and a time to heal; a time to break down and a time to build up;

A time to weep, and a time to laugh;

A time to love, and a time to hate; a time to war, and a time of peace;

Wherefore I perceive that there is nothing better, than that a man should rejoice in his own works; for that is his portion: for who shall bring him to see what shall be after him?

Principal's Message

The theme of the 1964 Gargoyle is the World's Fair, but the World's Fair has a number of themes, the first being represented by the Unisphere, Peace through Understanding. Robert Moses said, "This fair is not just, as some people have said, a commercial gadget. . . . But we have really tried to make this a sort of Olympics of progress." The progress shown at the World's Fair is not just that of the world of things, such as electronic devices, or the latest model of automobile, but also of the worlds of art, of ideas, and of the spirit. The theme of the Gargoyle invites the seniors of Flushing High School to display their own progress, not only in facts learned, but also in attitudes developed, arts appreciated, habits of clear thinking established, and moral and spiritual values ingrained.

ADMINISTRATION

Am I imagining things, or is my cookie crawling?

Approaching Flushing High from the gardens, we observe its Gothic architecture in full glory. The gardens, filled with Rose of Sharon, pink Dogwood, and people accent the building's other-worldly appearance.

Our courtyard, with its red tile surface, and a chortling Quasimodo watching from the main entrance, is an ideal spot for meeting friends and enemies, for dislodging pebbles from one's shoes, and for discovering much-needed small change. In fact, one member of this yearbook's Literary Staff, after a brief search, managed to pick up three cents and a fairly good bobbypin.

Mrs. LaBarbera, Guidance Counselor

Students who have the stamina to elect another four years of "book-larnin'," and consider entering a college or university, gravitate to a narrow corridor behind the stage. There is a small, irregularly-shaped room, at the end of the passageway, which bears the legend "College-bound? Go Greyhound!" Students leaving this office sometimes find that they have attained the Nirvana of the college-seeker: utter confusion.

The above-mentioned unfortunates generally apply to the ground floor General Office for transcripts of their high-school records. The mass of the student body may arrive there for a variety of reasons—to retrieve a lost umbrella or deliver a program card.

ENGLISH

ENGLISH DEPARTMENT Front row: Mrs. Kessler, Mrs. Manifold, Mr. Zisowitz—chairman, Miss Spiro, Mrs. Goldsmith. Second row: Mr. F. Goldberg, Mr. Gray, Mrs. McConnell, Mr. Gerlich, Miss O'Connor, Mr. Koplik, Mr. Mangione.

English teachers have a unique problem in the presentation and selection of subject matter. They assume that the average English student has amassed, outside school, a knowledge of the essentials of his native tongue. Therefore, these instructors have emphasized literature over grammar in our English curriculum. Nevertheless, the typical English teacher regularly develops a whopping case of eyestrain from long hours of correcting grammatically infirm themes.

In the past, English teachers were accustomed to marking compositions solely on the basis of English proficiency. Today, in a trauma-conscious age, two marks are given—one for grammar, one for "originality." The student's psyche is less likely to be wounded when he has one good mark to fall back on.

Some teaching problems require the assistance of outside personnel—speech teachers, librarians, and well-educated parents to help Junior occasionally with the homework and tutor him on Shakespearean acting.

English poses special problems to the student as well as to his instructor. Half of these problems consists of the lack of enough Classics Comics to be substituted for the real McCoy when exams are imminent.

You are now under my power!

ENGLISH DEPARTMENT First row: Mrs. Furst, Mrs. Kalberer, Mrs. Garten, Miss Miller, Mrs. Gromulat, Miss Cohen, Miss Young. Second row: Mr. Feinbloom, Mr. Lonoff, Mr. Kay, Mr. Shoglow, Mr. Boxer, Mr. S. Goldberg, Mr. Fechheimer, Mr. Niemiec.

A related difficulty arises from the students' unfamiliarity with the world of letters. An appreciation of Shakespeare requires not only a wide knowledge of the history of the English language, but also an acquaintance with Elizabethan customs and writing.

The other half of the problem stems from a basic American trait—informality. Because grammar is so formal, students just don't take to it.

In view of the above generalizations, the student of English needs all the help he can get. Here, then, are seven sure-fire suggestions for getting at least an eighty-five in English:

1) Use a two-dollar word wherever possible.

2) During discussions of fictional characters, use psychological terms in analyzing problems. Amateur psychoanalysis is now very much in fashion.

3) If your instructor berates you for misspelling a perfectly normal word, strike back with the assertion that you are a proponent of the "phonetic school" of spelling.

4) Try to get into an Honors class, and, when you're in, ask your teacher to give you the minimum (85%) grade so as not to dampen your enthusiasm for the subject.

5) Muffle your New York inflection under an unctious British accent.

6) On essay tests, do not state anything conclusively.

7) And, when it comes time for the Regents, be absent with malaria.

I'm afraid my hands are stuck together

And this is the location of Don Quixote's summer place.

And he huffed, and he puffed, and he blew the house down.

SOCIAL STUDIES

History . . . marches on, to put it mildly. Every day, at least one hundred text-book-worthy events are manufactured. We may rest assured that ninety-nine out of every hundred will actually appear in such volumes. Because of such attention to detail, no history textbook issued by this school weighs less than one pound. After four years of carrying these Gargantuan belongings up and down stairs, the average history student weighs considerably less.

The subject has its compensations, though. Each branch of history has a particular savor: Modern World History—buffet; Economics—entrée; American History—blue-plate special; Ancient History—apéritif.

Each branch of history, too, has its particularly memorable lessons. Modern World History's high spot came during a discussion of The Brief Reign of Louis XVI. In American History, that event took second place to a discussion of

The Boston Tea Party. Economics is remembered for the lesson on Diminishing Returns. In Ancient History, the Ides of March lasted for two whole days. But the most memorable lesson of them all is the one which describes the Regents!

The American History and World Backgrounds Regents is, in the words of one faculty member, "The queen of Regents." It hangs over the heads of apathetic history students like a veritable Sword of Damocles. However, there is some compensation. Students taking the June, 1980 Regents will have considerably more history to study.

More conscientious students can sit back and enjoy the "extras" offered to them, such as the acting-out of certain historical events, the spirited "panel discussions," the debates, and the many film strips.

The first debate which most history students ever participated in occurred at the beginning of American History I, when the question "Did the Indians Get Scalped When They Sold Manhattan Island for Twenty-five Dollars' Worth of Cheap Trinkets?" was discussed.

The class was divided into two opposing sides. The odds were slightly weighted in favor of the white settlers, but the debate ended without any concrete decision.

Film strips are a relatively new feature of history teaching. They serve to update and supplement the data contained in textbooks, and give the average history lesson an aura of glamor. As we leave a typical history class, its members' eyes are still glued to that small screen. . . .

BIOLOGY

. . . of organisms

Did your specimens escape or is it merely your handwriting?

Go ahead and eat it—it'll do wonders for your complexion!

Biology is a truly amazing course. When, at the beginning of our first term of it, an instructor tells his charges that they will be given an "inside look at the animal kingdom," they do not take him literally. Soon after, though, they are happily (sometimes gingerly) slicing their way through an appalling maze of species, theories, and innards.

Common classroom discussion on lab days consists of a few choked phrases such as "Watch out for that intestine!", "Hey kid, your fruit-flies are escaping!", and "Good grief, it's looking at me!" Strange to relate, similar comments are heard all over the world, wherever biology is taught.

A new and more refined addition to Flushing High's biological science curriculum is microbiology. This is an optional credit course which offers college level work and conducts students farther and farther into the absorbing and complicated maze which constitutes the framework of all life.

. . . of function and phenomenon

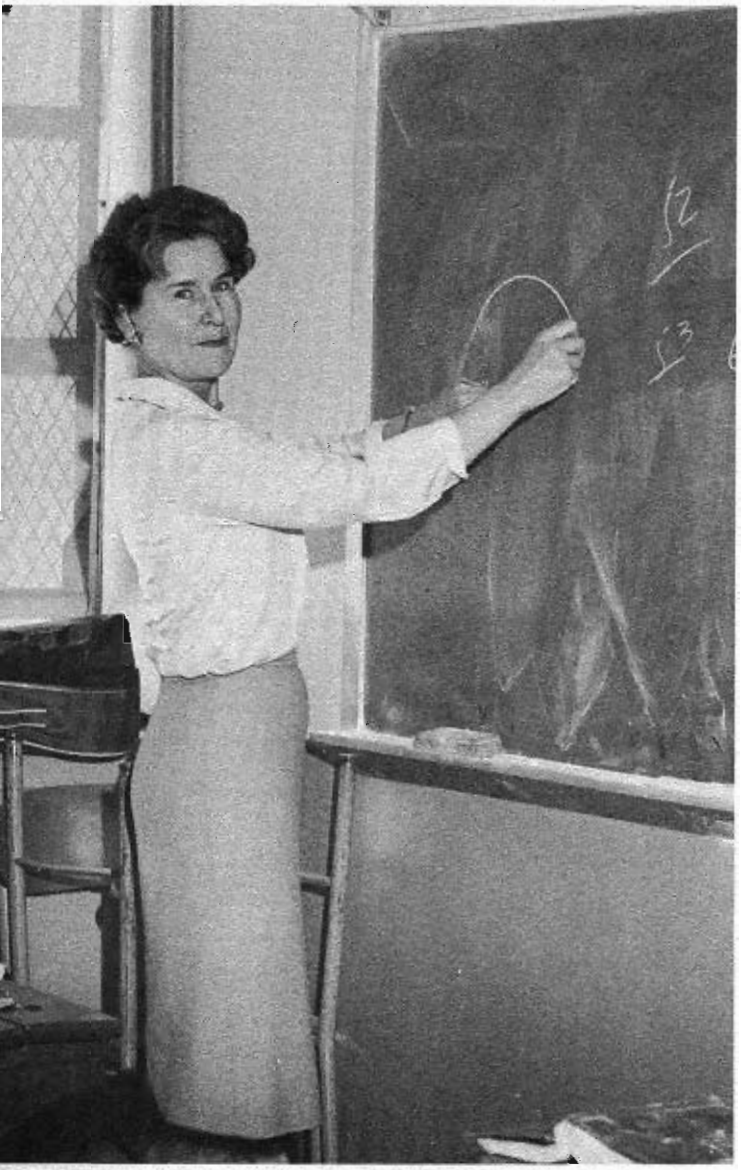
Chemistry is one subject which Flushing's students become acquainted with early in their sophomore year. Their sense of smell informs them of the proximity of Flushing's chemistry department, located on the third floor of the new building. Early in the term, Flushing's students are subjected to the penetrating odor of chlorine, the stinging smell of bromine, and the nauseating aroma of hydrogen sulfide. If they are astute observers, these silent sufferers detect sounds of splintering glass and the groans of adventurous students who have decided not to follow the usual curriculum.

In their junior year, when most students are confronted with the choice of a science, many seek strenuous courses. Those who choose to ignore the warnings of the countless unnamed students before them are usually surprised to find, if their choice is chemistry, that it is not really as difficult as they expected. It is simply impossible! Not only are chemistry students asked to tolerate the physical discomforts of the subject, but they are asked to memorize and learn to use numerous facts, tables, charts, statistics, and assorted trivia which seem completely unrelated. It is only towards the end of the year that they see the true beauty of the subject. All the meaningless data they have collected throughout the year have to make some sort of sense at this time.

At times, we may observe a group of Flushing's better chemistry students engaged in a chemistry research project. Located in the inner sanctum of the chemistry prep room is an assortment of intricate measuring devices, gadgets, and equipment, the purpose of which even some of the project's own members are unaware. In fact, the entire project is run with such secrecy that many of our students devote years to it without ever finding out its goals. The only hint available to outsiders is that the still always seems to be in use.

MATHEMATICS



Because of this high, we should be getting some rain tomorrow.

. . . of symbols

Mathematics is a language spoken by people of all the nations of the world. It is the basis of the practical and esthetic sciences with which we rule our lives.

Starting with ninth-year math, and becoming progressively more involved, Flushing's math curriculum is well-rounded. The student who majors in math starts with basic required courses and works his way up to specialized math electives such as solid geometry. Of course, most students see math as merely another difficult subject. Thus, the following explanation of two of Flushing's math courses is geared to practicality.

Geometry is an elusive structure composed of axioms, postulates, and proofs, all supported by a foundation of completely understandable geometric figures.

The geometry student is required to make various broad generalizations about such figures after being handed certain scanty information about them, such as their relation to his uncle, whether they're square or obtuse. . . . All of these deductions seem completely irrelevant when one reminds himself that all these facts pertain to a bunch of lines.

MATHEMATICS DEPARTMENT First row: Mrs. Lepowsky, Miss Pincus, Mrs. Toomey, Mrs. Koffer, Mrs. Kabriski. Second row: Mr. Shapin, Mr. Lutsky, Mr. Harpell, Mr. Blumberg, Mr. Kamlot, Mr. Schwartzberg, Mr. Lopiparo—chairman.

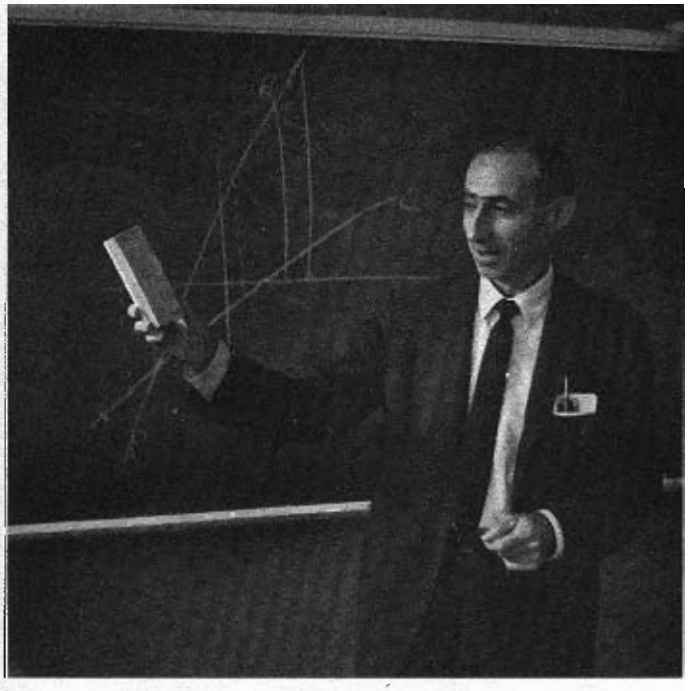
Teacher: Why, Herman! You mean you're actually going to answer . . . Herman: Kin I go out for a drink of water?

"8" ball in side pocket.

Geometry appeals to the eye, whereas algebra appeals to the imagination. A year of the latter course should adequately prepare anyone for life in the business world, since the wording of most of its problems is reminiscent of that found in corporate income tax forms. Here is a typical problem: If A were 2X—Y, eight years ago, and B will be Y years old when the Cleveland Indians win the World Series, how old will A's married sister be at that time?

There are also courses such as advanced algebra and solid geometry which we are not qualified to cover, owing to the limitations of space and official censorship, and also to the fact that we have been too spineless to take them.



Meet my friend, the eraser.

This is a big equation, so we'll have to retreat.

LANGUAGE

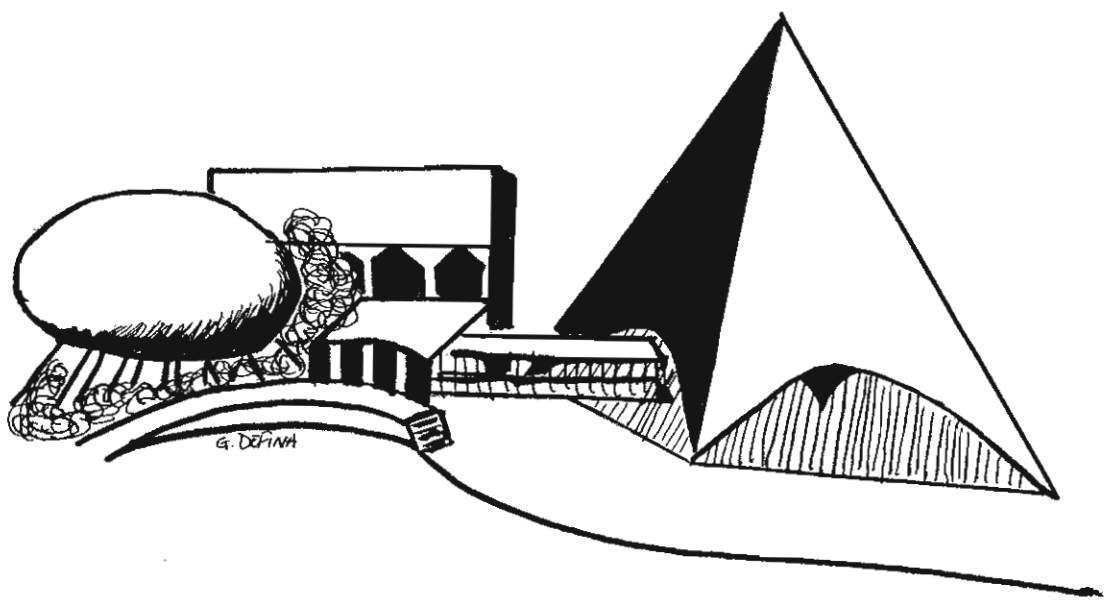
FOREIGN LANGUAGE DEPARTMENT First row: Mrs. Biezunski, Mrs. Finnan, Dr. Walker—chairman, Miss González, Miss Kahn. Second row: Mrs. Biederman, Mrs. Detilleux, Miss Turner, Mr. Costaras, Miss Gross, Miss Rubinow.

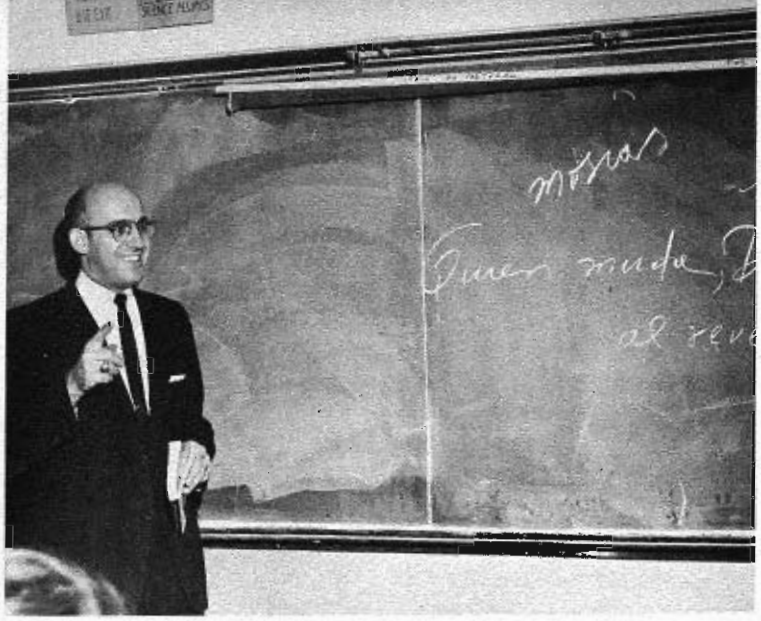
Flushing High School students can now converse in passable Spanish, French, Latin, German, Russian, and broken English. They can read Caesar's Commentaries and Cicero's speeches in the original; charge windmills in complete confidence with Don Quixote and weep bitter tears for de Maupassant's unfortunate Mme. Loisel.

Language is an elusive science. The study of literature and conversation alone does not impart a thorough knowledge of a particular tongue. The intricacies of grammar and the mores and reasoning of native speakers are perhaps the key to a full understanding of a language. Thus, Flushing High School's language program not only comprises grammar but also includes capsule courses in art, geography, and sociology.

In today's swiftly shrinking world, the study of language has become increasingly important. Yet, while most Europeans speak two or more languages as a matter of course, the United States has only recently awakened to the vital need for more thorough language teaching.

Another innovation in language teaching is extensive student participation. According to the old motto, Experientia docet, fluency is gained through practice in conversation and reading aloud.





And the farmer's daughter said to Sancho . . .

Devil's food cake, derived from the French diable, which came from the Sanskrit . . .

. . . of cultures

The elusive atmosphere of our language classes is difficult to sum up in a few lines. It consists of intangibles such as enthusiasm, snatches of recorded songs, the rattling of thirty-odd white papers, and the ring of thirty-odd voices reciting.

The common topics discussed during digression on the part of teacher, student, and sometimes entire language class are also illuminating.

The language department's latest innovation is the upstairs "lab." The lab has thirty booths, some fully equipped, which are designed to improve the students' conversational skills. A lab lesson begins when a class seats itself in the booths and has a rousing good time putting on its earphones.

Once acclimated to the machinery, the class tries pushing the various buttons on the control boards in front of it. Sounds such as static, a busy signal, the voices of another class singing "Alouette," and various odd grunts and thumps are emitted.

Once the monitor adjusts the master control, the class begins to hear its own voices, listen to playbacks, and learn, in earnest, the business of mastering a language.

If you don't give me this word in French in exactly one minute, I'll give you a test in Spanish tomorrow!

FINE ARTS

. . . of form and perception

Not even the bluntest realist can subdue his creative impulse when he is confronted with a couple of jars of paint and a clean sheet of paper. The finished product of his essay may not be mechanically perfect, but it is always an inimitable record of his personality.

In using art as an outlet for the expression of emotion and thought, the peoples of the world are united. In our art classrooms we learn of the world's great masters and their techniques, each a stepping-stone to a more explicit understanding of the world around us.

LIBRARIANS Mrs. Birn, Mrs. Newhouse.

Despite technical differences of size and architecture, our library is not far removed from its out-of-school cousins. It has dust-coated back rooms, unbreakable silence, and that same old five-cents-a-day, overdue fine.

At the tables of the library are seated studious souls who have been assigned there by the program committee. One can see them doing physics homework, perusing Macbeth, and infrequently reading books from the shelves.

A service aide or two passes by at intervals, carrying books and papers, or bringing reenforcements from the upstairs lunch counter. A service aide either disappears into one of the remote back rooms, or sits at a table near the checkout desk.

Portraits of past souls regard this assemblage with stern silence.

ACCOUNTING

The Accounting Department gives courses which enable its students to understand the many columns and figures of business ledgers, as well as to keep records of daily business transactions. These skills must be learned precisely or not at all, since the writing of a number in red instead of black, and in the first column instead of the second might affect the well-being of a business! Leaving the classrooms of these departments, we see, ranged along the walls, model ledger sheets and typed letters—of students who have paid attention to the niceties of their subject.

SECRETARIAL STUDIES

Our Secretarial Studies Department prepares its girls for "nearly everything a modern secretary needs to know." The "nearly" is inserted in this declaration because there are common-sense skills, pertinent to the modern secretary, which are largely a matter of her feminine intuition.

Our girls are given basic training in typing and stenography. Yet the modern secretary is more than a mere letter-arranger. She is a sort of "girl Friday" who will do anything from obtaining reference material for statistical reports to arranging office furniture, in order to make the machinery of business run more smoothly. It may be said that a secretary today must learn a wide range of skills in order to provide top efficiency. For this reason, more specialized courses, such as Secretarial Practice, prepare commercial students for the intricacies of space-age business.

INDUSTRIAL ARTS AND HOMEMAKING

With the advent of an increasingly complex industrial society, education has begun to look outward, diverting its curriculum from the world of letters and introducing into its programs subjects treating of the outside world.

Education has assumed the manifold task of preparing students for life in a competitive society.

Flushing High School's shops are one ramification of a large program of "practical" education. In them, a student can learn a wide variety of skills, ranging from electrical work, carpentry, and engineering drawing to the art of creating metal jewelry.

A little more carbon dioxide and it'll taste just right.

On the soft spring breeze, a tantalizing odor wafts to waiting nostrils. An unwary freshman who wanders into a suite of third-floor rooms, like a moth drawn there by the scent of victuals, is immediately advised that "This is DEFINITELY not the lunchroom." She is also advised to sample the food at her own risk, since it's prepared by amateur cooks. The freshman, still held immobile by the sight of food, may gravitate toward the "kitchenette" and stand drooling, over the burnt toast, the cans of beans, and the T.V. dinners—familiar items on the average newlyweds' dinner table.

On her way out, she may see a sewing class in progress and take a parting glance at the three-armed shirt and other custom-made items.

As we walk through the congested locker area and are deafened by the dissonance, we are soon greeted, a few steps beyond, by ethereal strains from Room 181. There abides the Lincoln Center of Flushing High School, comprising a string ensemble, a chamber music group, and two choruses.

A Flushing High School musician studies both modern and classical compositions, thus gaining an appreciation of what is perhaps the world's only universal language. He also has the opportunity to serve his school by performing at athletic meets, assemblies, and fund-raising affairs. A yearly music festival brings all of the school's performing groups together to create a most enjoyable evening of entertainment.

The general student body, which is at the "receiving end" of the music department's efforts, appreciates their efforts in bringing to the listeners a wide spectrum of sounds.

Arista—a word derived from the Greek, meaning "best," has been used to designate organizations composed of the scholastic élite. A student of Flushing High School gains admission to this "élite" upon attaining a ninety average and subscribing to high standards in service and citizenship.

The induction ceremonies which include the lighting of symbolic candles are reminiscent of classical rites, only differing to the extent that the flame of learning is now being rekindled.

If they raid, they'll come from the balcony.

Them hunters just got me!

In September, 1963, the political scene in Flushing High School remained static. There were two parties, Silver-Blue and Green and White, each having similar party platforms. In early November of the same year, a most unusual series of events occurred which tended to rearrange things. First, a new party, called Red, White and Blue, was formed; then the two established parties merged to form Green and Blue.

On the eve of the G.O. elections, there were two political parties, still having nearly identical platforms. However, the election campaign has been more spirited than usual. The halls were lined with posters, the floors littered with election pamphlets, and the classrooms filled with partisans sporting buttons of their candidates.

The rallies follow an "All-American" theme this year, with Green and Blue costumed as students of the nineteen-twenties, and Red, White and Blue assuming the aspect of Uncle Sam.

There is no foolproof way to gauge the effectiveness of a rally or to predict the outcome of an election. However, there is one thing which can be deduced from the course of this year's election campaign: The fact that student interest in political matters has been revived.

GREEN AND BLUE First row: M. Shio, L. Goldstein, B. Pecker—chairman, P. Buttino—chairman, P. Doughty. Second row: P. D'Amato, J. Scheib, R. Hyman, C. Jackson, M. Silver, J. Seaman, J. Those who have the most immediate interest in the elections—the party members themselves—have worked especially hard this year in promoting candidates. Slogans and posters have utilized everything from "The Beverly Hillbillies" to Playboy's rabbit. If the imagination and energy expended on this campaign are duplicated in the fulfillment of official duties, the parties will accomplish many things in the coming year.

Like . . . I mean . . . sort of . . . sing!

Red, White and Blue is good like a party had oughta!

In fact, the whole thing is nonessential.

The Forum Office is possibly the smallest office in the school. Its lack of elbowroom is amply compensated for by its picturesqueness. For one thing, it's L-shaped. For another, it has a window which takes up nearly an entire wall, opening out to a magnificent view of the gardens and terrace.

Other small particulars add to the room's flavor—the yellowing stacks of past Forum editions, some dating back to the 1930's and the perennial semi-darkness (this owing to a well-known policy of the newspaper: "If it ain't not necessary, skip it!"—the editors evidently thinking that it is best to conserve electricity.)

Still on the drawing-board is another item which will add tremendously to the place's picturesqueness—a genuine oil portrait of the present editor, contributed by himself. How thoughtful of him!

Problems, Problems! Our ghost writer ran off with his sheet.

Blumenrich. Second row: J. Kahn, J. Schneider, R. Gardner, P. Miller, R. Deutsch, A. Rowe, I. Shareff, P. Doughty, Mr. Gerlich—adviser.

FOLIO EDITORS L. DeFilippis, E. Bander—editor-in-chief, Mr. Gerlich—adviser, K. Nocerino.

Every day during the eighth period, room 308 changes color. It changes from the prosaic beige of a girls' hygiene room to the flaming scarlet of a center of great literary prowess.

Folio meetings vary in degree of color. They're a watery pink when Staff members have to rouse themselves from a deep sleep in order to give out with a rousing "aye" or two. They are a deep scarlet when everyone's wide awake, or not doing homework, ranting and raving merrily over such choice tidbits as "Was Cinderella actually young Queen Elizabeth I in Freudian guise?"

Mr. Gerlich, the magazine's long-suffering Faculty Advisor, sits stonily silent at the rear of the room.

As we sadly leave room 308, we hear the roar of . . . the radiator, which is acting up again.

Just look at this word brillig. It doesn't mean anything. In fact, the whole poem is worthless.

GARGOYLE EDITORS First row: K. Nocerino, J. Teich, E. Klein—editor-in-chief, D. Arkin, B. Pecker. Second row: G. De Fina, M. Finkle, Mr. Mangione—adviser, D. Freeman, R. Ripps.

So, it is true, isn't it?

Just opposite Exit 5 sits room 225 which has the dubious distinction of being the most versatile office in the building. It houses the entire staff of the Gargoyle—a cast of thousands; the entire Senior Council; Mr. Mangione and his English students; Mrs. Mandelbaum, Mr. De Meo, and the Folio closet.

Periods 7 and 8, this room looks like Grand Central Station during rush-hour. The different groups which compose the crowd are easily distinguishable.

A Gargoyle staff member is usually either staring blankly into the air, his hero sandwich grasped tightly in his right hand—or shouting at one of his compatriots, "All we ever do here is work, work, work!" And work he must, for the Gargoyle is run on a break-neck schedule—the completion of a yearbook in roughly six months.

Mr. De Meo and Mr. Mangione (the latter Faculty Adviser of Gargoyle) stay clamped to their desks, possibly wary of venturing out amidst the teeming of office personnel.

GARGOYLE STAFF Front row: G. De Fina, D. Freeman, B. Pecker, D. Arkin, E. Klein—editor-in-chief, J. Teich, K. Nocerino, M. Finkle, R. Ripps. First row: P. D'Amato, F. Mandel, B. Sotomayor, J. A Message From—Your "Prom" Photographer
We are sure you realize the "Candid" Photo you had taken at your prom was truly a nice, memory photo to have. However, a Fine Studio Portrait or a Complete Candid Wedding should not be judged by this one shot taken at your prom, regardless how flattering it may be of you.

When you desire a really fine Portrait or need a good candid Wedding photographer, choose a reliable studio that is a member of the Long Island Professional Photographer association and conducts its business under a strict code of ethics.

This is our fourteenth year as Flushing High School Prom Photographer. Surely, we are qualified as being most reliable.
